Growing up in central Switzerland, embedded in a large family circle and a rich traditional culture, she was trained as a teacher for textile design and nutrition, as well as a beekeeper. She also completed various training courses in metaphysical subjects. Due to the complexity of modern society, it is important to consciously reflect on one's own inner values. Understanding and knowledge of how to manage and heal our emotional states is essential for health, clarity and holistic thinking, which can benefit each individual, as well as nature and our communities. She wishes to emphasize this with her work, offering people the tools to be "healthy in spirit, soul and body". 她成长于瑞士中部的一个大家族,从小受到大量传统文化的熏陶,她曾受过纺织设计和营养学的教师培训,以及养蜂人培训。此外,她参与过各种玄学课程。在复杂的现代社会中,有意识地反思自己的内在价值观很重要。了解如何管理和治愈我们的情绪状态对我们自身的健康、拥有清晰的认知和整体思维至关重要,也使每个个体、自然和群体受益。她希望通过自己的作品来强调这一点,为人们达到"精神、灵魂和身体健康"而助力。

The painting "Timelines II" by Andrea Donner is an abstract expression of the interconnectedness of life. Through the use of acrylic and coal on linen upcycling, she creates a tapestry of greys and greens and blues, representing the various stages of life and the various timelines we live through. The narrow panels of fabric represent the different paths we take, and the lines connecting them represent the connections we make. The painting speaks to the idea of resilience and the ability to withstand the challenges of life. Andrea's use of color and texture evoke a sense of hope and optimism, while also hinting at the fragility of life. In addition, her use of upcycled materials is a reminder of the importance of sustainability and a commitment to protecting the environment. Overall, this painting is a powerful reminder of the importance of resilience and the interconnectedness of life.

The painting "Sprout" is an ethereal and captivating piece that reflects the beauty and complexity of nature. The large diptych consists of two canvas panels that have been upcycled from old linen sheets. The vivid colors of the painting are achieved through the use of acrylic and ink. The artwork is structured in such a way that when you look closer, it appears to be four paintings, where each panel is connected in the middle. This creates a serene, unified image which reflects the microscopic phenomenon of sprouting, with the intricate ink lines resembling the veins of leaves on a tree. The painting is full of life and energy, and is a reminder of the beauty of nature and how it is constantly transforming and evolving.
